Mexican Officer Arrested For Bet That Killed Five

Col. Alfredo Lezama Held in Probe of Aviation Disaster

TWO PLANES COLLIDE

Between Members of Squadron Believed Cause of Accident

MEXICO CITY, July 26.—(AP)—Col. Alfredo Lezama, commander of the 1st regiment of which two planes collided here yesterday killing five persons, was today placed under arrest on orders of the high military court which is investigating yesterday's aerial tragedy.

Four of the victims were aviators, the crews of the two planes which collided; while the fifth was a peon who was playing handball in a court where the debris of the broken planes crashed after the accident.

The arrest of Colonel Lezama is at the instance of the National Air school, which demanded that the question of the colonel's responsibility be cleared up at once.

The colonel's arrest was preceded by the discovery of military officers that prior to yesterday's maneuvers there was a bet between members of the two squadrons as to which side would perform to the best advantage. It was said that the losing squadron would entertain the winners at a victory luncheon.

The regiment took to the air yesterday in two squadrons of nine planes each, and were in the midst of regulation maneuvers when two planes collided sending four military men to their death and killing a fifth, a civilian, on the ground below.

The question at the trial of Colonel Lezama, military officials say, will be whether he as commander of the regiment knew of the bet which endangered the lives of the various members of the two squadrons.

Dry Agent Slays 11-Year-Old Boy

Officer Claims He Surprised Youth and Girl With Whiskey

COLUMBIA, Ga., July 26.—(AP)—A 19-year old boy is dead of shotgun wounds on a prohibition agent is held by police for investigation of a shooting which occurred in the back yard of a local residence during the night.

Ray Rodgers, 19, is dead; and W. K. Johnston is the prohibition agent who police charge shot him to death.

Johnston told the police he was hiding in the back yard of a local home during the night when Rodgers and a girl named Eunice Johnson, 13, drove up in a car. The prohibition agent flashed a light on the car and Rodgers struggled with him, so he told police. The gun went off during the struggle and Rodgers was killed, according to Johnston's story to local officers.

The girl testified under questioning by police, however, that no effort was made by the couple to obtain Johnston's gun.

The prohibition agent said that at the time of the shooting Rodgers was attempting to deliver a gallon of whiskey at the residence.

Spanish Prince To Enter Navy

Becoming Public Figure Since Announcement Was Made

MADRID, July 26.—(UP)—The infant Don Juan, third son of King Alfonso XIII and Queen Victoria Eugenia, has received orders from the Ministry of Marine to present himself at the Naval Academy of San Fernando, near Cadix, on August 1. The prince a few days before he celebrated his 17th birthday, stood the competitive examinations for entrance to Spain's naval academy along with the rest of the candidates, and passed all the subjects with brilliant grades. He was particularly proficient in mathematics.

Don Juan along with the youngest of the family, Don Gonzalos, has been kept in the background insofar as public affairs are concerned. The two boys were not even permitted to eat with the royal family, and instead, they sat down to their meals with the corps of professors. As a result they have become excellent scholars.

Now that the infant Juan is about to become a midshipman, however, he is already becoming a well-known public figure. He already has his naval uniform, in which he is a striking, robust figure.

Italian Resources Pouring Into Quake Stricken Section

King Victor Emmanuel Inspects the Relief Work Progress

CONDOLENCE GIVEN

Leaders of Many Other Governments Send Messages

ROME, July 26.—(AP)—Help for the stricken population of quake-torn Southern Italy was pouring into the devastated region today as the Italian government threw every resource into relief measures.

King Victor Emmanuel himself, who had started for the scene as soon as the gravity of Wednesday's shocks was realized, reached the town of Rocchetta in the province of Avellino, which suffered heaviest of all in the earth convulsions.

The monarch went to inspect the relief work in progress and to take comfort to his subjects who are actively engaged in the work of aiding the injured and sheltering the thousands of homeless. He traveled over the area by automobile and planned to visit other stricken towns.

At the same time, Monsignor Spirito Chiappetta, a special envoy of the pope, started a tour of the region and reached Benevento which also suffered heavily in the disaster.

Many Dead
The exact number of dead in the great quake was still somewhat obscure Friday night and the government was compiling a detailed account which will be made public as soon as possible.

The latest government figures place the number of dead at 1883 with the injured at 4264.

Of these by far the largest number of victims were in the province of Avellino, where the government reported 1607 lives were lost.

Reports were received during the night from General Baistrocchi, commanding the Neapolitan zone, as placing the number of dead in Avellino at 2574, but this was denied Friday night in a communique issued by the Stefani News Agency.

The government's figures of 1883 dead, however, were qualified by the statement that they might undergo change as the final reports were received.

Lindbergh Gives View of News

Says He Welcomes Accounts of Science of Air Travel, But Questions of Personal Curiosity Have No Place in Newspapers—Breaks Relations With Five New York Newspapers

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—The current issue of Editor & Publisher, out today, prints an interview of Charles Lindbergh in which he said he could no longer co-operate with the "flying colonel" explains his attitude toward the newspapers.

Lindbergh draws the line strictly between news accounts dealing with the science of his air travels, and questions that arise out of mere personal curiosity. "Pew writes.

Colonel Lindbergh told me that he deeply appreciated the liberality the press has shown him in publicity, but he named five New York newspapers which he and Mrs. Lindbergh decided they could no longer co-operate with in granting interviews.

"He said he considered it absurd that it should be necessary to station a hired guard at the gate of his wife's home. He told me of a certain newspaper reporter who had offered a bribe of $2,000 to a servant if the servant would give the newspaper the inside story of a family secret."

Negro Killer Still Evades Searchers

Widow of Louisiana Merchant Fails to Identify Blacks

SHREVEPORT, La., July 26.—(AP)—Despite the wholesale arrest of negroes, the slayer of C. J. Mason, merchant of Greenwood, La., apparently has escaped.

Twenty-six negro suspects were paraded before the widow today and she failed to identify any of them. A few more negroes will be brought in.

Mrs. Mason was positive that Sam Jones, negro, arrested at Gurdon, Ark., was not one of the two negroes who came into the store and shot down her husband after one of them had refused to pay for a package of cigarettes.

Sheriff T. R. Hughes said: "Mrs. Mason has looked at all of the suspects held here and no positive identification was made. As for the negro brought here from Gurdon, Mrs. Mason says it is ridiculous to accuse him of anything to do with the murder."

Tabulation Tonight to Decide All Races in County and City

LAST MINUTE VOTES

Festival Committees Also Urge Purchase of Last Tire Covers

The final tabulation of votes in the maids and queen contest of the Fifth Annual Watermelon Festival will be made tonight, with announcement of the winning maids in each township and the city of Hope Monday.

The windup of the campaign has brought active field canvasses and an avalanche of votes for the various candidates. The city of Hope has been thronged all morning with friends of the candidates soliciting support on the final day of voting.

Demand for votes
All local business houses have done a brisk traffic in votes, purveyors of goods calling for their full share of watermelon voting tickets.

After 6 o'clock tonight the ballot boxes will be withdrawn from all points in the city and county except two, Cox's drugstore on Elm street, and Moreland's drugstore on Main street, which two will remain open until midnight Saturday.

Tabulation of the votes will not be completed, probably, until after the week-end, and the winners will be announced in The Star Monday.

To Select Queen
Selection of the queen from among the winning maids will be made next week, and the works of fitting the maids and queen with their festival costumes will begin then.

With the close of the maids' contest the Watermelon Festival has launched a last-minute plea for purchase of what few tire-covers remain unsold. The publicity committee ordered 250, and all but 40 have been sold. Every Hope and Hempstead county automobile should have one, and the remaining 40 should be closed out today or Monday, the committee announced.

The shooting occurred when the two blacks met on the street, Pouncey advanced on Bell with a rock in his hand and the latter told Pouncey to stop or he would kill him.

Pouncey continued to advance and Bell fired three times with a revolver which he had been carrying wrapped in a newspaper. All three shots struck the other negro in the head.

The trouble was over Pouncey's wife, the two men having engaged in a heated argument the previous day.

Another Contest For Little Rocket

Ship to Be Entered in the National Air Meet at Chicago

LITTLE ROCK, July 26.—The Little Rocket, speedy monoplane in which Lieutenant Lee Gehlbach is setting the pace for fliers in the All-American Air Derby, will be entered in races at the national air meet at Chicago this fall and in other aviation events scheduled for the early winter, an official of the Little Rock Racing Association announced Friday.

The Little Rocket, sponsored by the Little Rock Racing Association, is said to be the speediest plane in its class in the country. It carries a 70-horsepower motor, with 20-horsepower supercharger, built by American Circus Engines, Inc., Marysville, Mich.

Lieutenant Gehlbach, whose skill in piloting the plane was said to be an important factor in the success of the Little Rocket in maintaining the lead in the air derby from Detroit to Roosevelt Field, N. Y., and from Cincinnati to San Angelo, Tex., where the fliers spent last night, will be engaged to fly the trim red-and-silver ship in the races this fall, officials said.

After the finish of the race in Detroit, Lieutenant Gehlbach will fly the Little Rocket to Little Rock. Arrangements are being made to give a reception in his honor when he arrives here. D. Hudson Lewis, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said.

Carver Carlton, passing home from his duties at the American Legion Miniature Golf Course, saw the fire and came to the boys' rescue, passing up a bucket of water on the line leading to the platform. The fire was put out, and the boys are still up in the air.

Glenn Curtiss' Record

THE death of Glenn Curtiss removes from the scene one of the great aviation pioneers—and, at the same time, emphasizes the extreme youth of this spectacular game which he helped bring to maturity.

Curtiss was not an old man, in any sense of the word. Yet Curtiss was connected with aviation from its earliest infancy. To the Wright brothers, of course, goes the credit for making the first airplane flight; but Curtiss was one of the leaders in developing the crude planes of the early days into the racy, efficient machines of today.

It is barely two decades since Curtiss amazed the nation by flying an airplane all the way from Albany to New York City. In that day, that was nearly as sensational a stunt as a trans-Atlantic flight is today. And yet, so rapid has been aviation's progress that Curtiss himself lived to see cross-country mail and passenger lines in daily operation, and but for his untimely death he would undoubtedly have witnessed even more striking developments.

A good share of the credit for all of this development must go to Curtiss himself. His Albany-to-New York flight was only one of a series of actions that made aviation's wings secure. Curtiss flew extensively in a day when every flight was a genuine risk. He experimented, studied and worked to give the makeshift planes of those early days safety and endurance. The present state of aviation is, in part at least, a tribute to his labors.

All of this, of course, does not detract in the slightest from the achievements of the Wright brothers. They are pre-eminent in the history of aviation, and no one can share their distinction. But Curtiss played an extremely important part. A country that has made the airplane an integral part of its organization owes him a vast debt. His departure is a distinct loss.

The Value of Fire Escapes

THE following is clipped from the pamphlet issued by the Arkansas Fire Prevention Bureau:

"At Milwaukee a short time ago 190 small boys and 26 nuns at an orphanage trooped down fire escapes in their night clothes at 1 a. m., as fire destroyed the building. All were asleep when the fire broke out.

Get a mental picture, if you will, of this safe deliverance from fire because of preparedness—fire escapes. Then form in your mind another picture that would have resulted, almost to a certainty, if preparedness had not been taken care of. In other words, picture this fire without fire escapes on the building and the tragic result that would have happened. Those fire escapes saved many, if not all, of those lives—216; which should furnish much food for thought and action on the part of those having the responsibility of buildings of this character upon them, where fire escapes have not been part of the consideration for safety.

The cost of such preparedness should play no part when construction is being considered, that is, no part that would cause fire escapes to be left off the plans and building. The full consideration in the matter should be given the conservation of lives that depend upon the building for safety. All buildings of more than two stories, where a number of persons, young or old, are housed day or night, should be equipped with modern life-saving devices—fire escapes. Firemen and ladders are good and useful, but they are not always there at the right time or in ladder numbers sufficient to quickly empty a burning building, through no fault whatever of the firemen. Rescuing people down ladders, as good as it is, is a comparatively slow process at best, where large numbers of lives are involved, and other means of safe exit must be afforded or the responsibility for loss of life may fall on the shoulders of those responsible for the lack of it. Fires burn rapidly sometimes and the mode of escape must be a quick and safe one. When human life is at stake the very best devices to conserve them should be available. — Jonesboro Tribune.

Vulgarity at the South Pole

THAT exclusive and aristocratic outpost, the South Pole, has been vulgarized. The Byrd Expedition, which we had been thinking had exceptionally good manners, made the Antarctic crass, common and crude, according to the film critic of the London Times, after seeing the party's motion picture. The Byrd film was rather startling, it must be admitted, if one had expected to hear the story of the expedition from a bearded professor in evening dress, mumbling a lecture illustrated with lantern slides. Instead of a travel tract, which the ponderous Times doubtless would have politely applauded, the film turned out to be a picture of how the men lived at Little America, how they entered zestfully into their adventures, which numerous views of the "austere beauty" of which the British critic wanted more. The "Hollywood touch" to which he objects presumably is the result of the intelligent editing which reduced 30,000 feet of film into 8000 that told a connected and interesting story.

However, the Times critic wait—there is a treat in store for him. Admiral Byrd and his staff are preparing the scientific record of the expedition, which will soon be issued in four volumes. And we feel safe in saying that there won't be a vulgar line in all those pages. — St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Still Drifting Back to Earth!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The nature of the Republican "platform" in the fall elections has been outlined in full through a radio address by the Hon. Jim Watson, Republican floor leader in the Senate. Although not heralded as an official party blast, one is informed that the gist of it will serve as a basis of argument for regular G. O. P. candidates everywhere in meeting the Democratic onslaught against the Hoover administration.

In spite of manifold Republican worries about Claudius Huston and one thing or another, the presentation was an able one and it will be summarized herewith because goodness knows how many persons were listening to jazz music instead of to Senator Watson. It's like this:

Defend Party Record

The administration and its forces have carried out campaign pledges successfully in nearly all respects despite vigorous, unfair, partisan opposition aided by Senate progressives who deserted their party.

The Hoover farm policy, which created the Federal Farm Board, is a prodigious effort which already has substantially helped the farmer in the face of world-wide agricultural depression. Without Hoover's leadership and the party's earnest efforts, the farmer's condition would be considerably worse.

The new tariff law is "chiefly in its rates, a farm relief measure." The immense importations from foreign countries were really responsible for the disastrous effects of the stock market crash last October. Now the party has undertaken to cure the situation with higher industrial and agricultural duties and the tariff will vindicate itself by restoration of normal, prosperous conditions.

The new flexible tariff provision available to President Hoover puts tariff making on a scientific, fact-finding basis for the first time.

We are still the richest and most prosperous nation in the world, with a national genius capable of surmounting every obstacle. The delay in enacting the tariff law, due to factional and partisan opposition, and the stock market panic which it helped to cause, were primarily responsible for the temporary depression. But the turn is now upwards and if the country will continue to support the Republicans and their policies nothing can halt national progress.

The prompt and statesmanlike action of President Hoover after the panic prevented consequences far more disastrous than those which have been experienced. "In conjunction with leaders of industry he made a program which has markedly alleviated the depression, guaranteeing work to hundreds of thousands of persons who might otherwise have been unemployed."

The London treaty not only regained naval parity lost at the Washington conference but stands as a landmark of progress toward world amity in the record of the Hoover administration.

The Hoover administration has settled the last of the war debts, standing for the sound policy of equitable settlement and refusing to be kidded into cancellation.

Stimson "Knows" His Mountains

Says That He Did Not Scale Peak As Has Been Credited

GLACIER PARK, Mont., July 26.—H. L. Stimson, Secretary of State, while a mountain climber of some note, dislikes seeing himself credited with scaling peaks he never reached. Superintendent J. R. Eakin, of Glacier National Park, who with his staff of rangers publishes a unique-hand-typed monthly mountain magazine recently received this letter of "corrected version" from Secretary Stimson concerning an article that appeared in "Glacier Drive."

"As a matter of strict accuracy, I did not scale the mountain in Glacier Park which has been given my name. It was more in the nature of a discovery than a mountain-climbing feat. I was a member of the exploring party which discovered it in 1891. I did, however, make the first recorded ascent of Chief Mountain in 1892 and my account is contained in one of the Boone and Crockett Club books published in 1931."

High Roumanian Official Shot

Anti-Semitic rioting in Roumania had an unexpected victim when a student, believed to be a Fascist anti-Semite, forced his way into the Ministry of the Interior at Bucharest and shot and probably fatally wounded Constantine Angelescu, above, the acting minister. The would-be assassin was believed to have acted in revenge for the firm measures taken by the government against anti-jewish disturbers.

Detroit Gunmen Kill Recall Leader as Election Ends

An artist's conception of the murder of Gerald W. Buckley, militant Detroit radio announcer and a leader in the movement to recall Mayor Charles Bowles, is shown above. This photograph was taken in the lobby of the La Salle hotel a few minutes after Buckley had been slain there by three gunmen who pumped a dozen bullets into his body. The artist has sketched the figures as the scene of the killing was described by witnesses.

GRAND OPENS NEW HOUSE WITH 1930 FOLLIES

Remodeled Grand Will Open Monday

Manager Johnson Announces Completion of Work on Theatre

New drapes and rugs have been ordered, and while the rugs have not yet arrived, they will probably be in place by the time the night show opens Monday.

An air-washer gives better cooling effects than in the past, and further improvement has been accomplished in the operating booth. New Patent sound equipment has been installed temporarily, until R. C. A. equipment which was ordered several months ago can be delivered from the factory.

The most pronounced change is in the appearance of the front of the building. The wide front of the old house has been closed in to give a small but well finished lobby, with a store-room on the right, and on the left the box office and women's rest-room. Overhead, an electric marquee is to be built in the next few weeks, adding to the commercial advertising signs of Main street.

The opening attraction Monday night at the Grand is to be "The Movie-

Follies Of 1930 At Grand Monday

Movietone Review Packs Full Entertainment Value Into Hit

A romantic story of youthful love, spectacular musical numbers, hundreds of beautiful dancing girls and an all star cast make "The New Movietone Follies of 1930," which comes to the Grand theatre Monday, an outstanding production since the advent of audible pictures.

It surpasses its predecessor, "The Movietone Follies of 1929," in all departments with a great cast and a story which would stand on its own merits without the elaborate trimmings provided by the numerous musical numbers.

The cast includes such favorites as El Brendel, Marjorie White, Frank Richardson, Noel Francis, William Collier, Jr., Miriam Seegar, J. M. Kerrigan, Yola D'Avril, Huntly Gordon, Paul Nicholson and many others, well known on screen and stage.

William K. Wells, author of many Broadway musical successes, wrote the story and the dialog and it is undoubtedly the best thing he has done to date.

Benjamin Stoloff, who directed the highly successful "Happy Days," "Girl From Havana" and "Speakeasy," handled the megaphone and has far excelled his previous pictures.

The ensemble numbers were staged by Max Scheck, Maurice L. Kusell and Danny Pare, all well known on Broadway as outstanding dance directors. They were placed in active competition with one another in this production and the result is the most spectacular series of numbers ever seen on any screen.

Three teams of popular song writers collaborated on the tuneful score and have succeeded in turning out even greater song hits than those which featured last year's "Movietone Follies." The composers and lyricists were Joseph McCarthy, James F. Hanley and James F. Brockman; Con Conrad and Jack Meskill, and Cliff Friend and Jimmie Monaco. All have authored scores of best sellers. Conrad will be remembered for his many song hits in last year's "Movie-tone Follies," including such numbers as "Walking With Susie," "That's You Baby," and others of equal popularity.

Work For Women At Farmers' Week

Many interesting Meetings Are Planned During Week

The crop handouts and producers of Arkansas's best crop are making their arrangements now to attend the Farmers' Week at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, August 5, 6, 7, 8.

The number of women, especially mothers, who feel that the work given each year in child welfare is exceedingly helpful is growing and the women are requesting more and more work that will help them in the rearing of their children.

The work of the general session for women given two afternoons will devote a number each day to the subject of child care and immediately after the general session an entire sectional meeting will be devoted to the needs of the growing child. The work will be given by women who have had special training and experience in working with children in their home, clinics, nursery school, and they will aim to make the work helpful and practical for the mothers by adapting the work to the problems of Arkansas children, for they realize that the state of Arkansas is marching onward on the feet of little children.

If the onward march is to be successful the little marchers will need not only sturdy bodies with strong legs, but also a fair field.

All over the state the women are busy. Dresses are being lengthened, the heads of petticoats let down, extra pieces of fruit and vegetables are being washed and hung on the line. Homemakers need weeks of planning in order to arrange not only to leave the farm home in order while they are away for a week, but also to get the family and camp kit ready for the week of camping and instruction at the state University at Fayetteville, August 5, 6, 7, 8, according to Martha Jane Bucher, home demonstration agent.

"Your husband looks like a brilliant man. I suppose he knows everything."

"Don't fool yourself; he doesn't even suspect anything."

Richard Dix Comes To Saenger Soon

Star Is Seen At His Best In "Shooting Straight"

Picture fans who like Richard Dix in the red-blooded roles which brought him screen fame again will see their favorite in this type of characterization when "Shooting Straight," Radio Pictures' gripping drama plays Friday and Saturday at the Saenger theatre.

For the past year Dix has been featured in a series of comedy romances which have brought out the fact that he is an excellent farceur. He returns to his old type of role, however, in this new production which has been unusually well received in other cities where it has played.

Dix is cast as a two-listed big city gambler and the story concerns his complete regeneration. Combined with the stirring drama of the picture is a strong romance with Mary Lawlor, beautiful Broadway stage star, playing opposite Dix. The two are said to form one of the most effective combinations in pictures today.

"Shooting Straight" is an original story by Barney Sarecky, developed along strikingly novel lines. It is said to represent the last word in talking picture entertainment, on account of its brilliant and fast-moving action.

George Archambault directed the production, and gathered together an unusual capable cast of supporting players. Matthew Betz, prominent screen "heavy," is the menace. Other important roles are portrayed by Robert Emmett O'Connor, George Cooper and William Janney.

Century Old Tale Basis of Film Plot

Big All-Star Cast Will Be Seen in This Picture at Saenger

A century old tale is the basis of "Bride of the Regiment," First National's big special all-Technicolor, all-Vitaphone film coming next Wednesday and Thursday to the Saenger theatre.

Of course, strictly speaking "Bride of the Regiment," is directly based on the Schnitzer and Welisch operetta, "The Lady in Ermine," but beyond that it goes back to an incident, supposedly true, of the Austrian invasion of Italy in 1830.

Since it happened in real life, the story itself has been a short story, a novel, a play, and an operetta in practically every language. The crux of the plot deals with the marriage day of an Italian Count, who has to flee from the Austrians on the eve of his wedding night, leaving his bride to entertain a handsome colonel of the invading army instead of himself.

A picture of an ancestress of the bride, called "The Lady in Ermine," is supposed to protect the honor of the women of the house, and in a novel way it saves the bride. The ingenuity of the plot accounts for its century-long popularity.

According to John Francis Dillon, who directed the First National film, this plot is "the ideal story for talking pictures, while the colorful time and locale make it the ideal subject for color photography."

A big all-star cast seen in the picture is headed by Vivienne Segal, Allan Prior, Walter Pidgeon, Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling, Myrna Loy, upino Lane, Harry Cording and Claude Fleming.

There are 1,237 farms in what is called "greater Atlanta."

DANCING JUDITH

BY CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH GRANT, artist's model, was ALAN STEYNE, her heart. Chummy had loved Steyne since she was a girl, and she had loved him since she was a girl. But now she was married to a man named GIDEON, and she was a mother. She was a mother of a little girl named JUDITH. She was a mother of a little girl named JUDITH. She was a mother of a little girl named JUDITH.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XL

DUMONT LAW JUDY oftener than anybody else during the next three or four days. She seemed to like him to sit with her. She was little and kind to him. She took great interest in his work.

They were days that passed like a dream to the young artist. He was unbelievably happy. Each day he thought Judy looked more as if she were coming back to life.

She said she had hardly any pain left, and she was healing up splendidly.

They were truly golden September days, and all his life Bastien never forgot them.

One day she said to him, just as he was going away:

"Bastien, are they saying that I am going to marry Mr. Gideon?"

"I believe most of them think so, Judy."

"You can tell them I am not. He asked me to, Bastien, but I said no."

"I don't think I ever believed you would, Judy," he said. "Only, of course, you were about with him a great deal."

"I know. I played a little game with him, Bastien, if you want to know. He didn't want to marry me—you can imagine that. He didn't think I was good enough; but he found he couldn't get me any other way."

The young man was white. His hands were clenched.

"Judy!" he said, and he shook with a frenzy of rage.

"It's all right, Bastien," she said. "You needn't worry. Mr. Gideon asked me to marry him, and I refused. We're more than quits. You can tell the boys that I'm not going to marry him."

"JUDY, you always said you would never marry until you fell in love. Aren't you ever going to fall in love?"

"Oh, Bastien!"

She heaved a deep sigh, although she laughed, too. He saw the sadness in her eyes, and he wondered and wondered, having no inkling of the truth.

"Bastien," she went on, "Chummy hasn't been near me since she first came—that was four days ago. What has become of her? Do you think they've been married?"

"Oh, Judy, we should have heard," he replied.

"Oh, I wish they would!" she cried. "I do wish they would!"

Her eagerness seemed natural to him, so he missed the feverish note in her voice. As he said goodbye, she took one of his hands and laid her cheek against it for a second, just like a child. Before he could stop himself he had bent and kissed her hair.

"Dear old Bastien!" Judy murmured. "You're such a pal!"

Dumont thought it strange that he had not seen either Chummy or Steyne at the Cafe Ture for several nights. Perhaps they had gone off and been married without saying anything. They couldn't have made much of a festivity of it, anyhow, with Judy laid up.

He thought he would look in at Chummy's studio on his way back. It was then about half past six. The day had been one of melting heat, and the atmosphere was dark and threatening. It felt like a storm. A few heavy raindrops fell as Bastien reached Chummy's building. He hoped it was not the break-up of those wonderful, golden days.

Not a sound was to be heard in the building. Dumont reached her floor and knocked at her door. There was no response. He knocked again with the same result.

He tried the door, then, and found that it was not locked; so he went in.

Chummy's place was rather dark at all times. There was a little dark lobby that led into the studio, where, of course, it was light, but a curtain shut off the entrance.

Leading out of the lobby on the right was a dark passage that led into the tiny gallery where Chummy's cooking was done. Her bedroom was on the other side of the studio.

The storm made it even darker this evening. Dumont stumbled against a tall oil jar that was meant to hold umbrellas. He called out Chummy's name, but there was no reply.

Just as he was going out, he smelled gas. The odor was strong. He thought Chummy must have gone out and left a burner on. He had better look into her gallery; so he went along the little passage and opened the door of the tiny kitchen.

Here the fumes of gas were almost overpowering. He dared not light a match, so he groped his way forward, as the little place was almost dark.

He gave a cry as he nearly fell over something soft. Pondering, he found that it was Chummy, quite unconscious, her fair head lying almost in the gas oven, the door of which was open. He began to choke and splutter, as he felt the gas burners and found them all turned full on. When he had turned them off, he picked up Chummy and carried her into the studio.

He opened all the windows, top and bottom, and felt the fresh air rush in and purify the place.

He felt very queer and cold. What had happened to Chummy? Had she gone mad? Or had she been cleaning her gas stove, and succumbed to the fumes? But one didn't clean a gas stove with the burners turned on.

Curiously enough, Bastien had once before been present when a friend had been resuscitated after having nearly killed himself in this selfsame way. He knew what to do, and he did it without going for a doctor. Chummy was very far gone; but he satisfied himself that she could be revived; and he knew she would not wish him to call a doctor.

For by this time he realized that Chummy had intended to commit suicide. He was still numb. It was so sordid—Chummy lying there, with her head in the gas oven, Chummy so badly bit by life that she had sought this way out!

He could imagine other girls doing it—even Judy, under certain circumstances; but not Chummy—Chummy, who had made up her mind that love came before work, and who was going to be married and live happily ever after!

Her eyelids stirred, and she moaned faintly. Dumont held cold water to her lips. She drank a little. Then he hurried out to the gallery, and, knowing it was now safe to strike a light, put some water on to boil.

When he came back she was sitting up, greenish white about the face, but breathing more or less normally.

"Bastien!" she gasped.

"Chummy!" he replied, with as much reproach as relief. "What a dreadful thing to do! It was luck that I came in time!"

And then the proud, reserved Chummy came to the end of her self-control.

"I wish you hadn't come!" she cried. "I wish you hadn't come!"

She broke down completely, and it was terrible to watch.

Little by little, Dumont managed to soothe her and to bring her back to normal behavior; but she was completely demoralized mentally, and could no more control her moods than a person out of her mind.

She did what she would never have done, what she would rather have died than done, if she had been herself—she told him the truth.

"Bastien, you should have let me be. It's the only way out of it. Judy and Alan love each other, but they won't take their happiness because of me!"

At first Dumont thought Chummy must be mad. He had not had the faintest inkling of such a situation. He put it down to the gas. It had poisoned her mind. But, little by little, through her disorganized volition and her eloquent words, he came to see that she knew what she was talking about.

She gave chapter and verse. While the floodgates were open, the flood flowed through.

Judy and Alan loved each other. They had loved even more strongly since Alan came back. Alan had quite forgotten her, she said. Probably he had never loved her. He had been very fond of her as a friend—that was all; but he loved Judy. How could any man help loving Judy?

The last sentence was so true that Dumont laughed, and Chummy did not know that it was the laughter of despair.

"But why did one never guess?" he asked.

"Because they didn't want any, one to guess. Bastien," she said, still unable to keep anything back.

"They wanted to keep it from me. It was Judy at first—you know Judy; but afterward it was Alan, too. She made him see it that way."

"How do you know?"

"Because I do know—I can't help it. It was just before we were going to be married the first time—last year—I can't tell you, but I saw them together, and I knew. They were saying goodbye. Judy knew I loved Alan. She wouldn't take him from me. You know Judy. They didn't know I'd heard and seen."

"And then," said the young man, growing enlightened, "you suddenly decided that you must put your work before Steyne?"

Chummy nodded.

"Judy always thought you'd had a quarrel, you know."

"Yes, I know. I don't think she guessed at the time; but afterward she knew that I knew."

"Aren't you imagining things?"

"No, Bastien, I'm sure of it. Then, you know, she made her great success and went away, and I believe she took up with Mr. Gideon so that Alan shouldn't think about her any more. You know Judy. It was pathetic how she repeated those three words. 'She would never marry him while I was there—I know that.'"

"But then," put in Dumont, intensely puzzled, "you were going to be married—now?"

"I know. Alan drifted back somehow. I expect it was because Judy had gone and there was all that talk about Mr. Gideon. I don't know, but there it was; and I was persuaded against myself, Bastien. I ought to have known that he hadn't forgotten her. I thought perhaps he had; but on the night when we heard about the fire at the theater—the night when we were all at the cafe—I knew once and for all. None of you noticed him. I think; but I did. I just saw him die, Bastien!"

Dumont looked at her and was moved to action. Telling her to sit still, he went out, brewed coffee, and forced her to drink a cup. She had recovered somewhat, but she looked as if she had shaken hands with death.

The Hollywood Story

By ERNEST LYNN

To Hollywood they came from all over, answering the siren call of the movies. From Tulsa came Anne Winter, hoping to start as an extra. From New York came Dan Rorimer, newspaperman and author, with a contract to write scenarios. Mona Morrison, another extra, came from Chicago; Eva Harley from New Orleans.

Millions of people are interested in the movies and those who make them. Hollywood is a magic name, a glamorous place. "The Hollywood Story," The Star's latest serial, takes you behind the scenes in the motion picture capital and shows what happens. It's a fast-moving narrative, a fine love story, an equally fine bit of reporting by an ex-reporter. "The Hollywood Story" is the greatest newspaper novel in years.
